

What is the Saffron Walden Museum Society — and what does it do?

The Museum Society is a voluntary organisation which is a charity. It owns the museum building - one of the oldest local museums purpose built in 1835 - and the extensive collections containing many items of local, national and international relevance. The Museum Society also acquires additional artefacts to complement the existing collections, especially when these reflect a strong local connection or interest.

Acting as the 'Friends organisation' of the Museum, the Society helps to promote the further development of the Museum as an amenity for residents and visitors to Saffron Walden and Uttlesford, providing informal links between the community and the museum, and encouraging ready access by all, particularly children and younger people. The museum service itself is run by Uttlesford District Council in partnership with the Museum Society.

Our next major project is the expansion of the existing Museum building, vitally needed to house and present the ever-expanding collections of the museum.

Will you help our work in collecting and preserving our heritage for present and future generations? Would you like to Gift Aid your donation? If so, please tick this box and the Treasurer will send you details.
